Dear Sirs,

Please consider the following:

- Animals who are too sick or injured even to stand should not be allowed to enter the human food chain.
- In addition to posing an increased risk for bacterial contamination, there is evidence that some downed animals may be afflicted with a form of Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy, or "Mad Cow Disease", a disease that, as you know, has been linked to a fatal human illness.
- It is practically impossible to move downed animals humanely, and they are typically pushed with tractors or dragged with chains – inhumane processes which cause injuries ranging from bruises and abrasions, to broken bones and torn ligaments.
- Downed animals comprise a very small percentage of animals slaughtered, and prohibiting their market will cause no undue economic hardship.
- Industry experts have estimated that 90% of downed animals can be prevented with better care and handling. Removing the market for downed animals will provide an incentive for the industry to prevent downed animals in the first place.

I am in agreement with the above points of interest. Please end this inhumane treatment to animals by eliminating the downed animal trade.

Sincerely,

Amy H. Lutterloh
